Graham has been involved in arboriculture for over thirty years. Tree nursery, forestry and tree surgery work has been followed for the past ten years by local government tree officer and consultancy roles.

This has given him wide experience in all areas of arboriculture and he is conversant with all aspects of modern arboricultural practices particularly development sites and trees within the planning system.

Chartered status with the Society for the Environment complements Graham's lifelong interest in wildlife and the environment and he is particularly interested in the close association of arboricultural and ecological issues.
